5 November 2023 31st Sunday in Ordinary Time

Dear Parishioners and visitors,

Power and Positions of influence attract many people in our world, as they may be active in religion, or business, or politics, or some other field of endeavor. They may appear powerful, successful, or wealthy or may be celebrities known and admired by many. But what makes them or breaks them, Jesus suggests, is whether they choose to be servants who lead, or end up as leaders who refuse to serve.

Servant as leader is at the heart of the Jesus story. But Jesus does not serve and lead in order that others need not do so. He functions as the pioneer, opening the way so that others will follow. And it is glorious when they do so.

He points to characteristics of these leaders who refuse to serve. They burden others rather than relieve them of burdens. In today's language, they pursue their own agenda in defiance of what others want or need. They benefit others simply to benefit themselves.

Leaders who refuse to serve may behave like this. There are plenty of them around in many areas of life. Jesus criticizes in detail leaders of this sort. Even more importantly, he demonstrates in life and death what it means to be a servant who leads.

Jesus inaugurates his public ministry, which is characterized by healing, teaching, deliverance, and advocacy. His exercise of servanthood calls him out of the crowd and exposes him as the messiah, God's own anointed leader.

It takes him to the cross and tomb, where, through suffering and death and resurrection he becomes the new leader, the good shepherd, calling forth all people to join him on the new exodus from death to life, both here and hereafter.

"The greatest among you must be your servant." We are invited to seek and serve one another, and not to dominate. We seek to proclaim this word of God in the way we live and relate to one another. Jesus gives us the example of those who try to follow the letters of the Law but forgets the spirit and purpose of the law.

It is clear that our challenge is not to judge others nor to tell others what to do. Our challenge is to live the word of God in such a way that others are drawn to God. May we reflect the true face of Christ.

Lord's Blessings, Fr Regi
